The Saudi airman who killed three at a naval training center in Pensacola on Friday had filed a complaint earlier this year against an instructor who called him 'Porn Stash'.

Saudi Royal Air Force Second Lieutenant Mohammed Saeed al-Shamrani lodged a complaint in April against the instructor who gave him the nickname, in reference to his mustache, in front of 10 other students, according to The New York Times.

'I was infuriated as to why he would say that in front of the class,' al-Shamrani wrote in his complaint.
The FBI declined to comment on the incident. Investigators do not believe that the incident had any connection to Friday's shooting, the Times reported.

But they are coming under increasing pressure to deliver answers on the motive behind the shooting at the U.S. Navy base on Friday morning.

The bureau said Sunday it will be investigated as a potential act of terrorism as authorities explore whether the gunman's sickening actions were spurred by a radical ideology.

He had visited the 9/11 memorial in New York just two days before shooting where he met up with at least five other Saudi airmen and was able to buy the Glock 9mm pistol he used in the shooting legally in Florida.
Months before Friday’s shooting at Naval Air Station in Pensacola, Florida, Saudi gunman Mohammed Saeed al-Shamrani (above) lodged a complaint against an instructor who called him ‘Porn Stash’ - a reference to his mustache resembling that of a pornographic film actor.
Special Agent in Charge Rachel Rojas revealed Sunday that investigators have not yet been able to determine the motive.

Florida Governor Ron DeSantis, speaking at a Sunday evening press conference, said he was sure the gunman carried out an act of terrorism. He questioned whether it could have been prevented by better vetting of foreign military officers who train in the United States.

'There is a lot of frustration in our state over this,' DeSantis said. 'You have foreign military personnel coming to our base. They should not be doing this if they hate our country.'

'I'm a big supporter of the Second Amendment, but it's so Americans can keep and bear arms, not Saudi Arabians,' DeSantis added.
Authorities also believe the shooter authored a series of social media posts in which he talked about U.S. support for Israel and scolded Americans for being anti-Muslim.

After a trip home to Saudi Arabia in February, colleagues say he had become more religious, The New York Times reports.

It emerged as:

- Investigators face mounting pressure Monday to deliver answers on the motive
- The gunman visited 9/11 memorial in New York just two days before shooting
- Key part of the investigation into the shooting now turns to Texas, ABC reports
- FBI confirmed Sunday al-Shamrani had legally purchased the Glock 9mm pistol
- Authorities also believe he authored a series of social media posts in which he talked about U.S. support for Israel and scolded Americans for being anti-Muslim
- His fellow Saudi students are speaking directly with American investigators
- Colleagues say he appeared more religious after a trip home in February

A key part of the investigation has now turned to Texas, ABC reports. Al-Shamrani was first deployed to Lackland AFB, now part of Joint Base San Antonio.

The 'Porn Stash' incident took place at the end of a meteorology class taught by James Day.

Before Day dismissed the students, he asked if anyone had any questions.

He then turned to al-Shamrani and referred to him as 'Porn Stash'.

'Laughing, he continued to ask, 'What? Have you not seen a porn star before?' al-Shamrani wrote in his complaint, which was prepared with the help of two other American trainees.
'After I did not respond, he just let go of the subject.'

Family members and others identified the three dead as Airman Apprentice Cameron Scott Walters, 21, of Richmond Hill, Georgia (left); Airman Mohammed Sameh Haitham, 19, of St. Petersburg, Florida (center); and Joshua Kaleb Watson, a 23-year-old graduate of the US Naval Academy (right).

The revelation about the complaint filed by al-Shamrani surfaced on the same day that investigators learned he and other Saudi airmen who were in the US for military training visited the September 11 memorial in New York City just days before the shooting.

Senior law enforcement officials also say that al-Shamrani, 21, made preparations for the shooting by filing paperwork to purchase a gun in April.

The revelations about al-Shamrani's movements are part of efforts by investigators to establish an exact timeline in the weeks leading up to Friday's shooting rampage, according to The Daily Beast.

In the hours leading up to the attack, the shooter appeared to have posted criticism of U.S. wars in the Middle East to social media, saying he hated Americans for 'committing crimes not only against Muslims but also humanity' and for the country's support of Israel.

He also posted a quote from assassinated al Qaeda leader Osama bin Laden, according to SITE Intelligence Group. The shooter's Twitter account was taken down subsequent to the attack.

As of Sunday, investigators have no indication that al-Shamrani was helped by others.

The now-deactivated Twitter account purportedly belonging to Alshamrani included:

- A variety of anti-Israel postings and a quote from deceased al-Qaeda leader Osama bin Laden

- A lengthy manifesto posted at 4:39am Friday, less than two hours the shooting. The manifesto read in part:

  'I'm against evil, and America as a whole has turned into a nation of evil. I'm not against you for just being American, I don't hate you because of your freedoms, I hate you because every day you support, funding and committing crimes not only against Muslims, but humanity....'

Alshamrani was on the base as part of a U.S. Navy training program designed to foster links with foreign allies. He had started training in the United States in 2017 and had been in the Pensacola area for the past 18 months, authorities said.

Family members and others identified the three dead as Joshua Kaleb Watson, a 23-year-old graduate of the US Naval Academy; Airman Mohammed Sameh Haitham, 19, of St. Petersburg, Florida, who joined the Navy after graduating from high school last year; and Airman Apprentice Cameron Scott Walters, 21, of Richmond Hill, Georgia.

Investigators learned that a few days before the shooting, al-Shamrani and at least five other Saudi airmen traveled to New York City, where they visited tourist sites including the 9/11 memorial (above).

The Saudi gunman who killed three people at a naval base in Pensacola and wounded either others visited the September 11 memorial in New York City just days before the shooting, according to investigators.

Senior law enforcement officials also say that the killer, Second Lt. Mohammed Saeed al-Shamrani, 21, made preparations for the shooting by filing paperwork to purchase a gun in April.

The revelations about al-Shamrani's movements are part of efforts by investigators to establish an exact timeline in the weeks leading up to Friday's shooting rampage, according to The Daily Beast.

As of Sunday, investigators have no indication that al-Shamrani was helped by others.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation interviewed several Saudi airman who, like al-Shamrani, were in the United States as part of a military training program.

None of those Saudis appear to have had any involvement in the shooting, law enforcement officials told The Daily Beast.

The Saudis told investigators that they also noticed nothing unusual about Al-Shamrani's behavior during his trip to New York from November 28 until December 1.

During that time, al-Shamrani met up with at least five other Saudi airmen. They stayed at a lower-end hotel in midtown Manhattan.
The Saudis visited New York’s most popular tourist destinations, including the Statue of Liberty, Central Park, the Christmas tree at Rockefeller Center, and the 9/11 museum, according to investigators.

‘All the places they went were all the places tourists go see what this country's all about,’ one investigator told The Daily Beast.

Law enforcement officials said that the group of Saudis which included al-Shamrani also visited popular tourist sites like the Christmas tree at Rockefeller Center (left) and the Statue of Liberty (right).

Investigators noted that the 9/11 museum has pictures on display of the hijackers - 15 of whom were Saudi nationals.

Three days after returning home to Florida, al-Shamrani hosted a dinner party for his fellow Saudis.

It was during that event that he screened a disturbing video showing a montage of mass shootings.

After the shooting, a number of the Saudi airmen took cell phone video near the scene.

But investigators say they were merely doing what any other curious onlooker would do when seeing a large number of emergency vehicles descend on the area.

Investigators combed through the cell phone footage and found nothing unusual that would arouse their suspicions, according to The Daily Beast.

‘Nothing before the fact, nothing during,’ one law enforcement official said.

Meanwhile, new information has been gleaned about the long process that al-Shamrani went through to legally obtain the 9mm Glock 45 semiautomatic pistol used in the shooting.

The Daily Beast learned that al-Shamrani obtained a Florida hunting license that allowed him to take advantage of a loophole in federal law banning foreign nationals from buying a gun.

The loophole allows foreigners with a valid visa to buy a gun if ‘in possession of a hunting license or permit lawfully issued in the United States.’

One investigator said al-Shamrani’s choice of a Glock 45 with an extended magazine meant that the only thing he intended to hunt was ‘people.’
According to The Daily Beast, the gun shop in Pensacola which sold the weapon to al-Shamrani checked with authorities to confirm the validity of his visa.

The Saudi national was issued the visa in Riyadh. He arrived for military training in the US in August 2017.

In late July, al-Shamrani completed the 15-week process to buy the gun despite the fact that he was not allowed to carry the weapon onto the premises of the Naval Air Station in Pensacola.

By law, al-Shamrani also would not have been able to board an airplane with the weapon if he were to fly back to his native Saudi Arabia.

Investigators are now trying to figure out if al-Shamrani acted alone or if he was recruited and groomed as a sort of 'sleeper agent.'

If al-Shamrani was intent on killing Americans, investigators want to know why he bought a gun instead of waiting to come into possession of a far more powerful weapon that could maximize casualties, like a fighter jet armed with missiles or bombs.

Law enforcement officials also said that al-Shamrani went through the months-long process of legally obtaining a Glock 45 9mm handgun.
